Hi,

My name is Natasha, I am 27 years old and people consider me to be a very happy person. This might be because I got married this summer or just because I enjoy living my life. Challenges are something that drives me and is one of the reason that I lived for two seasons in the world's northernmost community, Longyearbyen.

My studies in information logistics has given me a broad knowledge of data and information management. It also taught me how different processes are influenced by the information provided or missing, something which I believe IKEA will benefit from.

I love to travel in an eco-friendly way and have written some travel blogs that has been much appreciated by family and friends. This made the step into Sigma Technology easy, by combining my interest in data and informatics with my hobby of writing. I completed and passed Sigma's writing test and during my practise at Sigma Technology in the IST project, I have learned that technical writing in combination with informatics is something I truly enjoy.

I want to be involved and participate when the world is changing and is curious to learn new things. I am perceived as productive, organized, thorough and accountable person. It is also important for me to have fun at work, which is appreciated by colleagues and clients.

Best Regards,

Natasha Asimiadis Steindal
